PRINTABLE LOGS AND TRACKERS

For Osteoporosis Exercises for Beginners

Print as many copies as you need. Keep the stack on the counter or windowsill, or clipped to a clipboard hanging on the back of a door. Each copy of the Daily Movement Log holds one week.

How to fill each column of the Daily Movement Log:

Date: the day, even if all you did was a short walk.

Session: Routine A, Routine B, balance snack, walk, or travel day.

Exercises done: the exercises you finished, or a tick for the whole routine.

Support: two hands, one hand, fingertip, or none.

Effort: easy, moderate, or "this is work."

Walk or march: total minutes, however they were split.

Longest balance hold: your best single-leg or tandem hold, in seconds.

Symptoms: anything you felt, or leave it blank.

Notes: one word. Steady, wobbly, strong, tired.

12-Week Progress Tracker: one row per week. Fill it in on Sunday with the log in front of you.

Sessions done: the number of strength workouts you completed that week. Two is the plan for most weeks; three if you added the optional workout.

Confidence: rate each one from 1 to 5, with 1 meaning "I'd rather not" and 5 meaning "I don't think about it." Use the balance rating for the counter drills, and save the daily movement rating for stairs, the car, the bottom shelf, and shopping trips.

Progression notes: the one thing you changed, in a few words. "Row to standing." "Step-up to 8 per leg." "One hand on single-leg stand."

If you run a two-week block twice, use the blank rows at the bottom for the repeated weeks. The tracker records what happened, and repeating a week is normal.

General education, not medical advice. If something feels wrong during a session, stop and check with your doctor or physical therapist.

DAILY MOVEMENT LOG

Week of: _____

Date	Session	Exercises done	Support	Effort	Walk or march (min)	Longest balance hold	Symptoms	Notes

MY THREE NUMBERS

Write your day-one numbers in the Day 1 column, then add a column each time you re-test. Write the new numbers beside the old ones, never over them.

Test	Day 1	Week 12	Month 6	Month 9	Month 12
Date
30-second sit-to-stand (full stands)
Single-leg stand, each foot (seconds, up to 30)	R L	R L	R L	R L	R L
Comfortable walking (minutes)

12-WEEK PROGRESS TRACKER

Fill in one row each Sunday, with your log in front of you.

Week	Focus	Sessions done	Balance confidence (1 to 5)	Daily movement confidence (1 to 5)	Progression notes
1	Safe positioning
2	Safe positioning
3	Consistency, gentle strength
4	Consistency, gentle strength
5	Whole-body loading
6	Whole-body loading
7	Balance confidence
8	Balance confidence
9	Hinge, carry, step
10	Hinge, carry, step
11	Maintenance template
12	Maintenance template				